ISTITUTO SUPERIORE ETNOGRAFICO DELLA SARDEGNA
NUORO, SARDEGNA (ITALY)

In collaboration with David and Judith MacDougall from the Centre for Cross-Cultural Research, Australian National University

will offer a 7-day VIDEO WORKSHOP IN VISUAL ANTHROPOLOGY 11 - 17 September 2010

at the Istituto Superiore Etnografico della Sardegna in Nuoro

This workshop is being offered to persons with little or no prior experience of video production who wish to use video in forthcoming research projects. It is open to graduate students and others with at least three years of tertiary education. The workshop will include basic video training and theoretical discussions of how video may be applied to research and publication in anthropology and related disciplines. The emphasis will be upon the conceptual rather than the technical side of video practice. The workshop is intensive and will be conducted all day for each of the seven days, with morning sessions normally reserved for group instruction, screenings, and discussion, and the afternoons for individual practical exercises in and around Nuoro. Although the workshop will not provide direct instruction in video editing, it will make use of a strategic approach to filming and "editing in the camera" so that students will learn to produce materials that can be edited effectively.

We believe video can be used effectively in field research without extensive training, provided one learns certain basic skills and overcomes the most commonly made mistakes. We also believe video can be used to do more than merely gather visual records. It can be used to approach knowledge in new ways, in a form of discourse significantly different from that of written texts. We therefore approach this medium as a new "language" that researchers can acquire and apply to their own disciplines.

The workshop will be conducted over 7 days, from 11 to 17 September 2010, at the Istituto Superiore Etnografico della Sardegna in Nuoro. It will be limited to a maximum of 12 students. 5 places will be reserved for qualified Sardinian applicants, 3 places for qualified Mediterranean African applicants, and the remaining places will be open to applicants from over the world. Participants will be selected on the basis of: 1) having completed at least three years of tertiary education (students who have completed an undergraduate university degree (such as a BA or BSc) are preferred); 2) having proficiency in English; 3) their intention to apply video to an imminent field research project; 4) the relevance of video to the proposed project; 5) how soon the project will commence; and 6) their need to acquire basic video skills. Students will be expected to provide their own video cameras for use during the workshop, as well as at least two hours of videotape. Cameras using most current digital formats are acceptable; however, the camera used should have provision for the connection of an external microphone, which will be provided by the workshop. A set of relevant readings will be provided. Readings, instruction, and discussions will be in English. A good command of English is therefore essential. Participants will be expected to attend all sessions for the full seven days.

THE INSTRUCTORS: The workshop will be conducted by internationally-known ethnographic filmmakers David and Judith MacDougall. The MacDougalls have produced over twenty-five ethnographic films and have wide-ranging experience in teaching ethnographic film and video techniques in Australia, USA, Norway, India, and China. Among their recent prize-winning films are Photo Wallahs, Tempus de Baristas (a co-production of ISRE), Diya, The Age of Reason, The Art of Regret, SchoolScapes, and Gandhi's Children.

APPLICATIONS: Applicants are requested to complete the attached form and supply a statement in English of not more than one page indicating their prior experience and reasons for wishing to participate in the workshop. Priority will be given to applicants who intend to conduct their field research in the near future. Participants will be responsible for their own travel to and from Nuoro, however accommodation and meals will be provided for the period of the workshop by ISRE.

The deadline for receipt of applications is July 23 2010. Applicants accepted for the workshop will be informed by August 6 2010.
